COUNTY CONVENTION.

We urge upon all Democrats in Montgomery to bear in mind that the meeting for the appointment of nine Delegates to the Democratic State Convention, will be held in this city, on SATURDAY, JUNE 30, 1860. Let there be a full turn out.

Baltimore Convention.

The despatches and rumors from the Baltimore Convention up to 11 o'clock last night, did not exhibit any greater prospect—if as great—for a harmonious and unit resolution than those of the day before. Bad blood seems to be the ascendant, and disgraceful personal quarrels and encounters, among delegates as well as outsiders, are of daily occurrence.

THE Journal of this morning states that we "produce" and "endorse" a "refuted slander upon Mr. LINCOLN," by publishing the resolution adopted at the Illinois Republican State Convention in 1854. We would like to ask our neighbor, whether he will deny that such a Convention was held at the time we stated:

Whether he will deny that the Convention appointed Messrs. ABRAHAM LINCOLN, JOHN F. FARNSWORTH, and RICHARD CANNING, to committee on resolutions.

Whether he will deny that said Committee reported the resolution referred to, to the Convention for adoption;

Whether he will deny that the Convention adopted the resolution referred to unanimously;

Whether he will deny that ABRAM LINCOLN endorsed the action of that Convention by supporting the ticket nominated by it;

Whether he will deny that the men who composed that Convention and adopted the resolutions are now in favor of Mr. LINCOLN and doing what they can to elect him;

Whether he will deny that Mr. LINCOLN has been, and is now, one of the leaders of the Republican party of Illinois, organized at the Convention referred to, and;

Will our neighbor claim that Mr. LINCOLN, either during the session of the Convention, or thereafter, opposed the doctrines advocated in the resolution?

Did he ever deny the authorship of the resolution, until he found, during his contest with Senator DOUGLASS, four years after its passage by the Convention, that it was injurious to his chances for the Senatorial?

We copy the following notice from the Dayton Gazette of this morning. Although short, it contains much truth, and while we thank our neighbor for this manifestation of his friendship, we urge upon our business men to pay attention to what he says:

"We are pleased to learn, that the subscription list of the EMPIRE is rapidly increasing. It ought to be taken by every business man in the city. It is a reproach to Dayton, that it does not sufficiently patronize the press. We trust that our new neighbors will fare better than we did in the publication of a daily. We had subscribers enough, but advertising was the great deficiency. Advertising pays four-fold, and yet there is not a really liberal advertiser in this city. In our opinion, Dayton deserves paying more attention than it does, and we hope our neighbor alone will do it. We hope our neighbor will do it, simply because his business men withhold it from the very patronage that alone sustains a paper. When we published the Gazette we derived at least one-fourth of our advertising from Cincinnati."

We copy the following extract from a Washington letter written to the Hamilton Telegraph, under date of June 16, 1860:

"Night sessions are held in both Houses, and the galleries are crowded with ladies and strangers every night. Hon. C. L. Vallandigham is doing good service, and is regarded here as one of the worthiest and most talented members of the House. The speech of Sumner is set down as a piece of high flown declamation, and low-flying blackguardism. He has not even the respect or confidence of Rep. publican Senators."

We copy the following extract from a Washington letter written to the Hamilton Telegraph, under date of June 16, 1860:

"The Society is asking the citizens of Ohio to furnish them fair grounds, &c., for a Fair, it may not be improper that the aforesaid people should be able to form a correct estimate of its true character, and thereby judge of its capability for doing great good."

"The Society had these facts were stubborn things, and comparisons were odious. The Society had held eight exhibitions, in seven States, and had received $200,000 as proceeds, out of which they had but $5,000 left. This tells badly, in comparison with the manner in which the Fair of the Royal Agricultural Society of England are conducted."

"The means of support exceed on mere ostentation. The receipts of the past year, out of Post Offices in this section of the State, Saturday afternoon, the day of publication.

U. S. Agricultural Society.

We had thought that the Portsmouth Republican was "gone up," for we hadn't seen a copy since "Uncle Abe" was nominated, but the number that reached us this morning gives evidence that McCOLLISTER still lives, and has not forgotten his old friends. Ide.

Come over and see us some Saturday evening and stay all week. Mr. Dayton "calico" is faster than that of Adams or Scioto.

For Dayton.

The citizens of the Hoosier Capital have this year explored many of the lovely nooks and corners within easy railroad distance of them, and some unaccountable oversight, they have or overlooked the valley of the Great Miami about Dayton—the most charming spot in the State. The oversight is about to be remedied, and on Thursday, June 28th, a gay party will leave the Union Depot about Dayton. It will be a pleasant trip, and those who have never seen the White Water and Miami country, will have an opportunity of viewing it in all its glory of a golden harvest, and those who have once traveled over it will rejoice to look at it again.—Indianapolis State Sentinel, June 21.

Ohio State Fair for 1860.

We copy the following from the list of "Premiums and Regulations" issued by the State Board of Agriculture for the Eleventh Annual State Fair, and urge upon the energetic citizens of the Miami Valley to do all within their power to render the coming exhibition more successful than any which preceded it:

The Ohio State Fair in 1853 was located and held in the city of Dayton, and the claims of the Miami Valley for the location in the city of Dayton for 1860, may briefly be summarized as follows: Dayton, according to reputation, is the most populous city, and being an inland city with no advantages except its own merit, is deservedly in rank, much higher. It is situated in the midst of the best agricultural region of the State—the Miami Valley yielding the palm for a soil of easy cultivation, and unequalled production to no other similar region or district in the State. Montgomery county is one of eleven counties in the South-west portion of the State, which represent one-eighth of the territory, but at the same time, contains one-fifth of the entire population, and nearly one-third of the entire wealth of the State.

The products of agriculture in the Miami Valley are varied, while at the same time the entire system of agriculture has attained a much greater degree of perfection than in any other portion of the State. Dayton is situated six miles north of Cincinnati, and is accessible from both cities, and the manufacturing, No. 5 Main Lane, New York, and to Washington, D. C., via Cincinnati, Dayton and Cincinnati, Dayton and Western, Dayton, Xenia and Beloit, and Dayton and Michigan;—these railroads with their connections make Dayton one of the most readily accessible cities in the State. Sixty-four passenger and freight trains arrive at and depart from it every 24 hours.

The hotel accommodations is greater than usual in cities of its size, and due preparation will be made for the accommodation of guests during the Fair. The prices at all the hotels, boarding and private houses, will be moderate.

This site chosen for the Fair is a tract containing about 35 acres, on Phillips' Hill, about one mile south of the court-house; the central portion of the tract is occupied by the Montgomery county Agricultural Society, the northern portion of the tract is elegantly bounded by a beautiful grove of native forest trees, and the southern part is obtained from the city and its suburbs.

These grounds are accessible by a road leading from the following roads:—

—Main Street, opposite Market House, —Oregon Feed Store.

—CORN, OATS, AND GROUND FEED.

POTATOES.
